Option on School Site Is Extended

The Carmel school board has until July 30, at least, to purchase the Hatton Fields site for the high school. This became known this week when the option was reported extended by the Carmel Land Company as from the original date of July 1.

In spiking a rumor regarding the site this week which suggested the matter of choice of sites might again be opened, Brig. Gen. D. W. Hand, speaking for the Carmel Taxpayers Association, declared that there was no such idea held by his group.

"That is not correct. No! That site (Hatton Fields) is settled upon. We consider that all past and done. We are merely interested in getting things done in the most economical way."

General Hand added: "We're pleased with the appointment of Mr. Mawdsley to the board, and with that of Mr. Van Riper, who we believe and hope will accept his appointment."

Peter Mawdsley was sworn in as a member of the board at last Saturday afternoon's brief organization meeting, and Mrs. Helen Levinson succeeded Miss Clara Kellogg as trustee. Hugh Comstock was re-elected clerk and Mrs. Doris Watson chairman of the board.

Charles K. Van Riper, leader in the movement to secede from the Monterey Union high school district a year ago, is at present in Hawaii and efforts yesterday to communicate with him on whether he will accept his appointment as trustee had so far resulted in no confirmation.

The question of why the school bonds, amounting to $165,000, were sold so many months ahead of the need for actual cash in hand for purchase of the site and building of the high school, has been repeated and again is raised by the Taxpayer group.

In communication with District Attorney Anthony Brazil, who advised the board to sell the bonds instead of waiting for developments, and with A. B. Jacobsen, chairman of the board of supervisors who handled the sale, The Pine Cone received a reply that it was usual to sell such bonds soon after receiving aproval of the electorate, and especially when such a favorable money market was to be had. It was indicated that the danger of controversy in so fertil a field as this might have jeopardized a favorable sale in case of delay.

On the other hand, in questioning the wisdom of the early sale of the bonds, some business men pointed to the fact that interest amounting to several thousand dollars would have to be paid the first year, together with an equal capital amount.

Supervisor Jacobsen said he did not know of any legal objections there might have been to delaying the sale but that at the time the sale then had appeared the right thing to effect and District Attorney Brazil had so counselled the board.

Brazil stated that he had discussed the matter of the bond sale with brokers and had gone into the matter thoroughly before rendering his legal opinion. He said that it had seemed that the matter of interest appeared insignificant in the face of possible controversy which might have discredited the bond issue.

"Cottage Hotels" Hit In Passage of Zoning, Building Ordinance

With passing of the amendment to the Zoning Ordinance No. 96 by the Carmel city council Wednesday night, "cottage hotels", previously countenanced under the old ordinance, are banned from multiplying in the residential areas from now on.

Hearing on the proposed change, mainly defining single-family dwellings and guest cottages and stating the number of persons who may be "guests" therein, in the residential zone, was held some time ago.

Hotel men several months ago protested one apparently flagrant violation of residential zoning against which the old ordinance proved almost worthless.

DID YOU SEE ANY OF THESE PEOPLE THIS WEEK?

People you might have seen in Carmel this week: Theodore Dreiser, author of "An American Tragedy", who stayed at Pine Inn; Ruben Mamoulien, Hollywood director; Rupert Hitchcock, ditto; Clark Gable, screen actor, all three staying at Del Monte Lodge.

CARMEL ASSESSMENT BY COUNTY UP 7 PER CENT

CALIFORNIA RODEO COWGIRL IN ACTION

This picture of Lola Galli, San Benito cow girl hazing a steer, is publicity for the California Rodeo at Salinas, July 13 to 16. We run it because it is high-class publicity and none of the usual Chamber of Commerce bare-legs. It has news value to every Californian. It is tasteful. Above all, it is a good photograph. We hope it brings out three times the crowd that any "girlie" publicity would. Mrs. Galli, in the saddle from childhood, rides the range on the Quien Sabe ranch, works in rodeos. No bathing beauty queen is she.

Extra! "Amelia Earhart" Note Found by Scouts on Beach Near Big Sur.

Boy Scouts at Camp Esselen at Big Sur yesterday morning reported finding a purported "Amelia Earhart" note on Pfeiffer's Beach near Big Sur.

The Carmel Pine Cone was the first news agency with a reporter and photographer on the scene in an effort to check on the report and to discover the authenticity of the note.

What our reporter discovered: The note in a bottle had been tossed into the sea for a treasure hunt July 4!

Fools' Luck! As Greenhorn Sailors Survive the Deep

By FRANCIS L. LLOYD

With only a sketchy map of the coast—no sailor's chart of rocks and coves—and only a brief experience with the ways of the ocean, two greenhorn yachtsmen sailed their tiny 25-foot sloop into Stillwater Cove at Pebble Beach one morning this week, weary and frightened after a night at anchor in the open sea outside Point Sur lighthouse.

The night was one of torment, with steamers howling in the fog as they passed Point Sur. They also had other hair-raising experiences, as they tried to pass Point Arguello (which gives the bad reputation to Point Conception northwest of Santa Barbara) in a foul gale. There they saw a three-masted schooner turn back because her foremast was blown out by the northwest gale she was trying to buck.

The boys, Hanley Oremus, Long Beach linotype operator, and Ward Page, Santa Barbara youth, both blond young Vikings, nevertheless kept on trying to pass the point, went five miles further than the schooner before calling it quits and running back to the Coast Guard station at Arlight. Here they anchored for two days, waiting for the wind to go down.

After that they cruised northward, put in at Avila near San Luis Obispo, at San Simeon, and halted for a night outside Point Sur. They tried to anchor just southward of Point Sur but were frightened by the shallow water and went outside to deeper water.

They finally came into Stillwater Cove just before their first heavy fog shut in. They plan to go to San Francisco, and may spend some time there fishing for salmon to replenish their "stake" and then sail on to the Columbia river. Alaska also beckons, but they admit it's a long way off.

Hilary Belloc, who operates the launch "Sea Hawk" at Pebble Beach, welcomed the young sailors and loaned them a chart of northern California waters which will help guide them on their way. Capt. Leonard Johnson, port captain at Stillwater Cove, also made the youths at home, where yesterday noon he piloted in the big 105-foot yacht "Enchantress" also from southern California, returning from watching the start of the Honolulu yacht race from San Francisco. Quite a contrast in yachts, this ill-assorted pair!

Oremus—who declares his name "may be Irish"—built his little boat, which is 25 feet long, 7½ feet in beam, and draws 3½ feet. She is designed by John Hanna for Modern Mechanics Magazine, and Oremus had a boat builder make her frame, planked her himself in spare time. The craft is V-bottomed, has a half-ton keel. She is a gaff-headed sloop, but makes good headway under power of her little Star gas engine, used all the way here because of headwinds.

Only preparation for their big adventure was a shake-down run over to Catalina Island. Both young sailors were in high spirits a few hours after reaching dry land and shaking the cramps out of their sea-legs. Oremus and Page were last seen waving a gasoline can and a vinegar bottle from the cabin of their little sloop as they prepared to put out into the great and awful ocean once more.

A RIOT ON THE RIVER
THREE BOYS AND A DOG
by
Oliver C. Bassett

USELESS IS USELESS

I came to my senses to find myself in the river. Having forgotten that I was sitting on the back of the boat I prepared to go to sleep in the middle of the stream and so I found myself when I came to the surface.

I will not fill the reader up with details but will let you find out the details for yourself.

It was about 5 o'clock when we reached our destination. The river there flowed a little faster than farther down so it had taken us, or rather Dick and Cheese, a longer time than they had expected. But now we were here and it was time to drop anchor.

"Pull her over to the side, J. S.," Cheese yelled.

"O. K.", I cried back, and proceeded to do as told.

When the boat came alongside the land, Cheese and Dick took the line that they had been pulling and swung aboard.

"Quick," Dick called to me, "get the anchor or we'll be swept downstream and all our work would be lost."

"Right!" I snapped back, and dove in to the cabin to get the named article.

As I went I heard Cheese yell:

"Quick: Get one of those poles, Dick, and we'll try to stop the boat from going too far downstream."

I did not hear Dick's answer for I was running for the cabinet in which we kept the anchor. When I got to it I flung the door open and then stood still in amezement, the anchor was not there!

I quickly searched the cabin. I knew I must be fast for I knew that nothing that Dick and Cheese could do would hold the boat perfectly still, and that every minute we were losing ground that we had worked so hard to gain.

"Hey, Joe!" I heard Dick yell, "step on it, we're losing ground fast."

I ran to the door and called desperately that I couldn't find it.

"O. K." I heard Dick answer back. "come around here and help Cheese. I'll see if I can find it."

I ran down and through the cabin and out the back door to find Cheese and Dick pulling desperately. I took the pole from Dick and was noticing that we had lost considerable distance when Cheese yelled:

"Hey, look!" and pointed to the door that I had just now come out of and there in the doorway stood Useless with a rope in his mouth that disappeared in the cabin.

"Grab that rope!" Cheese howled, but as Dick sprang to get it Useless jumped inside.

"I'll get it!" promised Dick and as he spoke he disappeared in the cabin.

"Well," said Cheese, "we've got enough on our hands without having that dog grab every rope he sees. I wish . . ."

But suddenly he was cut short by a shout from the cabin.

"I've got it!" Dick was yelling, "Useless led me to it and I'm coming out now."

"O. K. Step on it," we called back.

Without more to say Dick ran out of the door and across the deck with the heavy anchor. He was just about to where he was to let the anchor go when Useless, who had been running alongside of him, decided to cross. Dick tripped and landed flat on the deck but the anchor went out of his hands and slipped overboard. Without even saying good-bye.

"Oh, my gosh," said Dick, scrambling to his feet, "I stepped on it . . . I stepped on Useless!"

Mrs. Mary A. Goold Gives Youths Use of Building

The Carmel Youth Progressive Club Association, the group of young men of ages between high school and 30, who have banded together for mutual betterment and social and recreational activity, at last has found a home.

This will be in the building owned by Mrs. Mary A. Goold at the southeast corner of Sixth and Junipero street which Mrs. Goold has generously offered to the club to be used for its center along with provision that the club may count any improvements planned toward the first three months' rent on the property.

The offer came as result of inquiry by Police Chief Robert A. Norton on behalf of the club of which he is a sponsor and who long ago, as one who grew up in Carmel, saw the need for such an organization. Mrs. Goold and Norton got together over the proposition and worked out an arrangement which is at once a great bargain for the club and equitable to Mrs. Goold's interests.

Mrs. Goold is owner of the entire block between Sixth and Junipero and Ocean avenue and Torres street, a site which has been considered at various times for a city hall and for a post office.

As the post office is a subject in the air at present, the property may ultimately be sold to the government and in this case Mrs. Goold will protect the youth group with an arrangement regarding improvements, it was indicated.

Frederick R. Bechdolt, commissioner of police, who is playing an active part in assisting the association, this week said that no such large sum of money would be needed as under other tentative proposals for a clubhouse, and that a contribution, whether furniture, fixtures, etc., or cash, will be most welcome.

Art Jennings Exhibits 18,000-part Railroad Locomotive in Grove

Art Jennings, Carmel's machinist who recently completed a scale model steam locomotive into which he built 18,000 parts, is being shown in Pacific Grove at 213 Forest avenue.

The locomotive, tender and cars are being shown on a track 180 feet in length.

Jennings' rolling stock was built in the garage of his home on Mission street during the last two years and Jennings made all parts from diagrams and blueprints for actual locomotives, casting his brass and cutting his tubing from stainles steel rods.

Widespread publicity has been given Jennings' achievement throughout the United States and his native Canada, where he was born in an Ontario railroad center.

Bach Festival Lists Star Pianists; Linsley Here

As fifth annual Carmel Bach Festival approaches, musicians and music lovers throughout the state are feeling its pulse. The festival is bringing as its solo pianists three outstanding performers whose devotion to music and to Bach has made them distinguished on the Pacific coast.

From Pasadena comes Ralph Linsley, than whom there is no finer ensemble pianist in the West. Ralph Linsley has been with the Bach festival since its first year, and before that the Denny-Watrous Management brought him here with Michel Penha and the Neah-Kah-Nie string quartet. He is a graduate of Yale University, a Phi Beta Kappa, has accompanied many of the world's artists such as Albert Spalding, Maurice Marechal, Luisa Espinel, etc. He has been the official pianist under Richard Lert in the Hollywood Bowl, playing all the cembalo parts of the stupendous production of "Martha", "Jeptha", "The Messiah", etc. He has been pianist with many trios and piano quartets, and now is the pianist of the Van Leeuwen Trio.

Linsley plays all the cembalo parts of the Festival, plays the solo piano in Johann Christian Bach's Concerto for piano and orchestra on Tuesday night, a violin-piano sonata with Robert Pollak on Thursday night, and is one of the pianists in the concerto for three pianos on Saturday night.

From Los Angeles comes Sumner Prindle, who will be heard as soloist in the concerto for piano and orchestra in A minor on Thursday night, and in the three piano concerto on Saturday night. Sumner Prindle has just completed a 38-week series of programs over the Don Lee network of the Mutual Broadcasting System. The week before the Festival Mr. Prindle will be heard in recital at the University of Oregon and immediately following his appearance in the festival, he leaves for the East.

From San Francisco comes Douglas Thompson, who is the pianist of the San Francisco symphony. Mr. the San Francisco symphony. Mr. Thompson has twice played as soloist with the Symphony, and has given innumerable recitals of modern music, classical music, ensemble music, etc. He has accompanied many famous artists, from Tito Schipa to Sally Rand. He played under Arnold Schoenberg in "the great orchestral production of "Pierrot Lunaire", and has made two world tours.

The concerto in D minor for three pianos, played by Linsley, Prindle and Thompson, will be a feature of the Saturday, July 22, program of the Bach Festival.

Option on Sunset School Site Extended by Sellers

it becomes my duty to appoint two persons to serve as trustees on the governing board of the Carmel Unified School District, which will become operative on July 1.

I have, therefore, given careful consideration to such appointment and have asked and received the wholehearted cooperation of many outstanding citizens of your community. Many names have been suggested by either groups of citizens or by individuals. One seldom sees such a splendid list of competence and ability. Any two would be an excellent addition to a governing board.

In making my choice I based my selection on the following qualifications, namely:—

1. Sympathetic interest in public education.
2. Tact and sympathetic consideration in dealing with the public.
3. Business acumen.
4. Zeal and personal contribution for the planning and organization of the Carmel Unified School District.

After due consideration of all names submitted I selected Mr. Charles Van Riper and Mr. Peter Mawdsley to serve for one year.

Both of these men have made a tremendous contribution in time and money toward the organization of the Carmel High School. In all my 33 years service in public education, I have never seen men exhibit more zeal, more energy and more tact and patience in the pursuit of a goal to be won.

Every obstacle encountered was approached with the most skillful diplomacy and the patience and toleration exhibited toward the voters contacted for signatures on petitions was an amazing masterpiece. It is my decision that two such men cannot be surpassed for the task in hand. I therefore appeal to the citizens of Carmel Unified School District to lay your shoulders to the wheel of loyalty, cooperation and encouragement to these splendid men in their efforts toward the building of a first class high school.

Sincerely,
JAS. G. FORCE.

Carmel School District Budget Hearing in August

The Carmel district school board will hold a budget hearing the first week in August. With a view to this hearing, the following statement concerning the 1939-1940 school budget is issued by the Carmel board of trustees:

There will be no raise in the school tax for the Carmel District, according to provisions of the tentative budget which has been adopted by the Sunset school board.

Present estimates call for a 36-cent tax rate to provide funds for current expenses in the elementary school, and a 26-cent rate for the high school. This rate is for all expenses, including the tuition to be paid to the Monterey Union high school district for the education of pupils in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades. Tax rates on school bonds have not yet been set, but are estimated to amount to approximately 35 cents in addition. The board is determined that the combined taxes of high school and elementary school, including the bonds, will not amount to more than 97 cents.

Last year's tax rate for the elementary school was 36 cents, the same figure as the estimated rate for 1939-1940. Expenses of the high school district, new this year, will call for a total expenditure of not more than 48 cents, including bonds.

Old-time Neighbors of Carmel, the Field Family of Monterey.... .....by John Joseph Wintersteen

(The following article is from the News Letter and Wasp and is contained in the historical and biographical work, "Golden Empire", by John Joseph Wintersteen).

Back in the chivalrous and romantic days of Spanish California, in 1820, there came to Monterey a Spanish diplomatist of ancient lineage, Don Esteban Munras. He and his wife, Dona Catalina Manzaneli y Ponce de Leon, built a home in Monterey known as "La Graja", which contained the first fireplace built in a private home in California, and the first marble mantelpiece brought to the State. The original Munras estate is now in the possession of some of his descendants, notably his great-granddaughter, Excelentisima Maria Antonia Field, and her brother, Jose Esteban Field.

The original grant was for 30,000 acres, but it has been gradually broken up through the years and only a portion is now owned by members of the family. The town of Soledad occupies a part of the original estate.

Another small grant to the Munras family, however, has been preserved intact through all the years. It is the Rancho Laguna Seca, of 2200 acres, east of Monterey, now opened by Maria Antonia Field and her brother. It is precisely the same property that was granted by the Spanish Government, and ratified by the Mexican and American Governments. It is an interesting fact that this is the only Spanish estate that has come down to the present generation without change of ownership, except by inheritance. It is now the home of Jose Esteban Field. He married Miss Louise Alta-McClellan and on Feb. 7, of this year, a daughter was born to them, who also, bears the name of Maria Antonia Field.

The Fields can boast of a lineage of extraordinary antiquity and distinction. Don Esteban Munras, paternal great-grandfather, was a native of Barcelona, a distinguished diplomat. His wife was a descendant of King James of Aragon, who reigned long before the discovery of America. His family was referred to in the heraldic archives of Spain as early as 1360.

Coming to California, Don Esteban married, in 1822, Catalina Manzaneli y Ponce de Leon. She was a stepdaughter of Dr. Manuel Quixano. Her mother was Maria Casilda Ponce de Leon y Davalos, a member of the celebrated Ponce de Leon and Davalos families, two of the oldest and proudest in Spain. The senior member of the Ponce de Leon family always had the "hereditary right to remain covered in the presence of the sovereign". Another member of the family was Juan Ponce de Leon, the celebrated discoverer and explorer of Florida in 1521.

In California Don Esteban became a friend of the early missionaries, and provided the murals with which the San Miguel Mission is decorated, and so admired today. Munras avenue in Monterey was named for him, and he was prominent in official circles during the period that Spain governed California.

When the Mexicans came in and took over the administration of the territory, Don Esteban Munras retired from public life, declining to take the oath of allegiance to Mexico. He and his family would have returned to Spain had it not been for the entreaties of Padre Juan Cabot and other missionaries, who prevailed upon him to remain. He died at Monterey in 1850. In his notes, the American Counsul, Thomas Larkin, thus referred to Don Esteban Munras: "He was a gentleman of property and character, disgusted with Mexican politics and California being lost to his native Spain; as a resident in private life, he favored a change of government to either the United States or England."

The grandparents of Maria Antonia Field were Rafael and Maria Antonia Danglada.

Dr. Manuel Quixano, step-father of Dona Catalina Munras, was a native of Valladolid, Spain, and was the last physician to come to California under the Spanish Government. In the records of the San Carlos Mission is found this interesting entry: "In 1815 Dr. Quixano made a tour of medical inspection of the missions, as serious illness afflicted the missionaries as well as the laymen of Southern California. Everywhere he was treated with the respect due his rank, but especially to his ability and benevolence."

Don Manuel Quixano resigned his official commission when California passed under Mexican rule in 1824, and died in Monteery, at "La Granja", the home of his step-daughter, Dona Catalina Munras. Members of the Quixano family are buried in the Pantheon of the Cathedral of Burgos, Spain, celebrated for its magnificent alabaster sarcophagi.

Don Rafael Danglada, grandfather of Maria Antonia Field, came to Monterey in 1850. He was a native of San Sesbastian, Spain. He belonged to the family of the Counts de Conques. His wife, Maria Antonia Munras, was the daughter of Don Esteban and Dona Catalina Munras. To this union was born one daughter, Catalina, who became Mrs. Thomas Joseph Field.

Thomas J. Field was born at Frankfort, Ky., June 3, 1848, the year the Mexican War ended. He was a member of the Board of Supervisors of Monterey county for 24 years. He became the pioneer banker of Monteery, and interested in the Del Monte Properties.

Excelentisima Maria Antonia Field was decorated by King Alfonso XIII of Spain, February, 1931, in recognition of her efforts to preserve Spanish California history and traditions. She is the only woman in America who has the right to use the prefix "Excelentisima."

As a descendant of historical families of Old Spain and of prominent Spanish pioneers in California, a member of the Munras and Danglada families, no one was better qualified than Maria Antonia Field for this work of research. From her interesting Handbook of California History, "California Speaking", we have taken the following paragraphs:

"There was gay social life in Monterey, not only among the old families, but with the entertaining of distinguished visitors and officers of the Russian, English, French, Spanish and American vessels that visited the port. From early times there was Spanish aristocracy in California, and among the families having claim to noble lineage may be noted the de la Guerra, Jimeno, Indart, Orena, Munras, Danglada, Zabala, Estudillo, Yorba, Palomares, Sunol and others."

"In 1848 was founded in Monterey the first convent for girls, St. Catherine's School, taught by Dominican Sisters. The teaching was in both Spanish and English. The first day the school opened the following girls were enrolled: Soledad Rome, Engracia Munras, Maria Malarin, Amelia Cooper, Luisa Moreno, Dolores Munras, Mariana Gomez and Ana Hartnell.

It was in this convent school that Conception Arguello took her religious vows and became Sister Dominica. The romance of Conception Arguello and Count Rezanov is too well known to need mention. Conception was of mature age when, after waiting many years for the return of the betrothed, learned that he had died soon after leaving Monterey, and devoted the remainder of her life to religion."—May the future be as Romantic as the past.

The memory of George Gershwin, beloved composer and musician, whose distinguished career was prematurely ended by his death July 11, 1937, is to be revered in a memorial concert of his works by their foremost protagonist, Paul Whiteman.

Whiteman will conduct his own orchestra, augmented by leading members of the CBS Symphony. Deems Taylor, another intimate friend of Gershwin's, will be master of ceremonies for the program, and Jane Froman will have vocal honors. Roy Bargy is to be featured pianist.

The program as a whole is to represent a cross section of the gifted young American's talent in the diversified fields of musical comedy, motion pictures, concert and opera. Naturally the "Rhapsody in Blue", introduced by Whiteman at the now famous Aeolian Hall concert of 1924 which catapulted Gershwin to fame overnight, will be the chief d'oeuvre.

Among Gershwin song classics to be sung by Miss Froman will be the equally indispensable "It Ain't Necessarily So", from Porgy and Bess, and the classic blues number, "The Man I Love."

Complete program follows:

Liza, orchestra, chorus; Cuban Overture, Rosa Linda, orchestra; The Man I Love, Jane Froman, orchestra; Medley: Embraceable You, orchestra and Lady Be Good, Roy Bargy and Frank Signorelli, piano team; Summertime, orchestra; Love Is Sweeping the Country, orchestra, chorus; Three Preludes, arranged by Roy Bargy, orchestra; Bidin' My Time, Modernaires, orchestra; It Ain't Necessarily So, Jane Froman, orchestra; Rhadsody in Blue, Roy Bargy, orchestra; Medley: They Can't Take That Away from Me, orchestra - Somebody Loves Me, orchestra - 'S' Wonderful, Jane Froman, chorus.

The program replaces Howard Barlow's usual Symphony Hour on Sunday, July 9, and may be heard over KSFO-KNX at 11 a. m.

Following is a complete list of the plays to be revived on The Workshop Festival this summer.

In the intervening weeks, original radio plays will be presented. The first is William Saroyan's "Radio Play", which will be aired from New York July 15, (Saturdays, KSFO-KNX, 4:30 p. m.)

A BARREN YEAR

The Fourth of July has come and gone—without benefit of the old traditional Carmel theatricals. The Forest Theater is dark, but we have become accustomed to that in recent years. It is, however, being prepared for a possible Fourth of July show next year. Now, what is galling, is the absence of any vestige of the drama right here in Carmel.

Of course, you can go over the hill and see, in the First Theater, in Monterey, Carmelites doing a first-class job in "Uncle Tom's Cabin", presented by the Denny-Watrous management (also Carmelites), but that's still not drama in the supposed home of culture, Carmel.

This condition is not entirely new. We looked up the files and found that 1936 was a similarly barren year. It is nevertheless deplorable that we can't have at least one play of our own right in Carmel on the Fourth of July. It's an old tradition, begun by the Forest Theater Association, fostered by the Western Drama Society and Carmel Arts and Crafts Association, and later on by the Community Players and Ted Kuster's Players of the Golden Bough. A dozen years ago we had rival shows on July 4 and both drew audiences and sparkled with talent. Whence, then, this present scarcity of dramatics?

Today the theater situation in Carmel is one in which the community has parted over some silly matters, serious enough in the lives of the main principals, but not much for the rest of the community to get huffed over. There is talent here, if it will come out, and there are plenty of good, strong workers who enjoy painting scenery and operating the lights. There is always new blood in the theater during the summer. And what is being done about it? Practically nothing. True, the Carmel Players will keep going under an arrangement to be made with the Adult Education program, but that is a mere ghost of former greatness. The Players are to be encouraged in any step they may take toward surviving.

A long view of the matter is that Carmel has always had its ups and downs over extended cycles. With one or two enthusiasts on the job, theatricals have got going, gained momentum as others flocked to the banner, gone loping off on a tangent as a social nucleus or got into a dog-fight, and then has come the awful dawning, that once again Carmel is in a dramatic slump. When we get down in the slough of despond, we are perhaps closer than ever to a new lighting of the torch. Perhaps, with the Forest Theater being reconditioned for next year, we may have something to show the world on July 4, 1940. By that time, we may have enough rival shows to give every visitor to Carmel a seat with a few to spare in the back rows of the Forest Theater and Sunset auditorium.

(Here's another thought: With the discontinuance of WPA aid to actors, we may get back the overflow of professional and semi-professional and near-professional talent we used to draw to our supposedly bohemian surroundings! Goody!)

SOMEONE IS HAPPY

Golden Gate Exposition directors, offiicials, employes and concessionaires have had reason to smile lately. For, after a long period in which attendance generally was seriously under expectations, business has taken a strong upward spiral. Better weather has helped—and now tourists are beginning to arrive in droves. Recent calculations show that attendance must hit 30,000 daily if operations are to show a profit. A total of well over 4,000,000 admissions have so far been sold.

All this is gratifying, and no doubt surrounding areas, including Carmel will soon feel the lift.

SATURDAY

He opened Saturday with his forefinger
And we stepped in—it was a lovely sphere
Our feet turned as we ran; how light, how queer,
Revolving rose and lilac and syringa!
See now! from Friday we have rolled asunder;
Tomorrow is not yet: give me a needle,
I'll sew the slit up in Today and wheedle
Sly Time, the Thief, the Thief! to let us stay
In this warm light, in this revolving wonder,
Spinning forever in this Saturday.

—ELIZABETH HOLLISTER FROST.

WORDS FOR A SONG

It was once upon a time
That all the world was young
And I could taste a rhyme
Like honey on my tongue.

It was long and long ago,
Very far and far away,
That I learned all that I know
One morning of one day.

Oh, these words I love to say
And these sounds I love to rhyme:
Long ago, and far away,
And once upon a time.

—CARL BOSTELMANN.

MIDDLE AGE COMES TO CARMEL

The beat of the sea
Sets my heart free;
Far, purple mountains
Strengthen me.

Behind or ahead what matter the years?
Where are yesterday's fears?
Purpose re-enters my hand
In the yellow sand.

Life has not died:
Look, in comes the tide!
Why, the blue of that sea
Is the beauty in me.

—MABEL ADAMS.

CHILDREN OF SOIL

I saw them rise in winter when the leaf lay thinly on the land. I saw their eyes burn fiercely on the snow. This was their grief, that winter tricked them with an old disguise.
I saw their idle hands unconsciously stir in the olden ways, as if to guide the spilling of a seed. I saw the knee bending to earth to thrust a weed aside.
I heard their talk like ice upon the door weigh down the wintry silence of their thought, breaking in brittle words that asked for more of rapture than a sterile season wrought.
Yet something, weathered of this long distress, was wisdom to behold—they seemed to bear
that kind of courage, born of idleness, which nurtures on the stubble of despair.

HAM 'N EGGS NOVEMBER MENU

Is Culbert L. Olson a democrat? Well, is he? That's a very hard question for any clear thinking, sane democrat to answer. We recently heard a number of the party's prominent leaders on the Monterey Peninsula asked that question and not one of them would answer out loud in the affirmative.

But whether democrat or Rooseveltian, with his "must" legislation at Sacramento and his intense desire to spend other people's money, real democrats can take one small bit of consolation in the governor's statement that although he has named November 7th as the day for the Ham and Egg referendum, he personally does not favor the plan. It is the crackpot lieutenant-governor, Ellis E. Patterson, who is trying to harness up a band wagon with himself in the driver's seat.

Governor Olson had very little choice but to call the election, as the petition asking a referendum had the required number of names for a referendum appearing thereon.

It is a sad commentary that there were enough people wanting something for nothing to even fill the petition which demands over two hundred thousand names before going before the governor.

There is little or no chance that the thirty dollars every Thursday plan will carry; it was defeated by about four to one in the last general election. However, spurred on by Ellis Patterson who thinks he sees in it a chance to garner a lot of votes in his coming race for United States Senator, the bankrupting plan is with us again.

While the state is being put to the expense of an election, we think that it would be really useful if Ellis E. Patterson be made to sink or swim, depending on the result of the ballot.

VAN RIPER TO SERVE, WE HOPE

There seems to be a great deal of doubt whether or not Charles K. Van Riper will accept the appointment as one of the members of the unified school board. We know Peter Mawdsley has already accepted and are happy that he has done so.

We may be all wrong but it is our opinion that Charlie Van Riper will be on that school board just as soon as he returns from Honolulu. We are basing our statement on many reasons: we have been rather close to the whole school matter and have had contact with Superintendent of Schools James G. Force. When names were being submitted to Mr. Force he constantly asked whether or not each individual had signified he would accept. In other words Force was not going to select names at random only to find that the person selected would decline. Force was too close to the picture to let that happen to him. And we are too interested in the welfare of the school not to cheer the appointment of Van Riper. Both appointees are well-known to the village and both have been actively connected with the high school project from its inception. Van Riper was largely responsible for the success in circulating the petitions in the face of almost insurmountable odds and his energy was in large part responsible for the putting over of the high school idea; Mawdsley was chairman of the fact-finding committee and knows the financial side thoroughly. These are the two new members of the high school board. In all, Carmel can feel that it will be very ably represented in school matters.

Now we have the money, we have the board to administer the funds, we have the location on which to build the high school, and we have the pupils expecting to be educated in the new plant a year from this Fall, so let's go ahead, believing that all controversy is ended.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

It will please many friends of long standing of both Hildreth Masten and Moira von Schoeler that the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Masten is to be known by the name of Moira.

Moira Wallace is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Wallace, who came here in the early days and graced the village with the wandering-in-and-out presences of a writer and dreamer, Grant, and a dreamer and mystic, titian-haired Peggy, and all three are linked with the period of Carmel's heyday.

We should look back to 1925 and the lush years that followed to see as pretty a picture as some of us can remember. Carmel was blessed with many beautiful children in the early days as it is now, and about 1925 some of these were growing up and beginning to blossom.

In one particular little group of girls, most of whom were active at that time in Forest Theater and Carmel Follies and busy with paint brush in the Hestwood art classes of those days, were Moira Wallace, Hildreth Taylor, the Burton sisters, Christine and Virginia (Tina and Ginnie), Anne Clute, Barbara O'Neil —those were just a few to be depended upon by a producer of a play to lend their beauty and dancing and singing and acting ability.

Of this group, perhaps the most opposite by nature were titian-haired Hildreth, slender and dynamic, and big blued-eyed Moira, almost a madonna figure and almost stolid, in spite of a certain Celtic quickness of mind. Of all their group, they are the two who have remained closely associated with Carmel.

In recent years, Hildreth Masten has been mother to a family which is now composed of two boys and two girls, all children to be envied by any parents; and Moira Wallace has been preoccupied with her art, doing murals for Del Monte, Coit Tower, the Fair, and sumptuous San Mateo homes, and with her two marriages, to Peter Harnden, so-called "international playboy", and Baron Walram "Vava" von Schoeler, German-born importer of New York and San Francisco.

Hildreth Masten has made no headlines, but she had her day of professional achievement when she danced in "The Volga Boatman" and in Hollywood Bowl several years ago. Moira Wallace has been in plenty of headlines, on her first marriage because of her position as an artist and because her family is well known in both southern and northern California, and only a few months ago when she divorced Harnden in Reno and a few minutes later was joined in holy wedlock with the Baron.

Today each is devoted to her art, Moira in her Telegraph Hill studio, and Hildreth with her latest creation, the little Moira, in her arms.

California has lost a minor poet of high qualities and a person who had a deep influence on the work of John Steinbeck. This person is Miss Susan M. Gregory, one-time Monterey school teacher, who was a friend of Steinbeck in the doubtful years when he was writing "Tortilla Flat", and whose poems were familiar to Pine Cone readers.

Herbert Heron, an admirer of only first-rate talent, spoke feelingly this week of the loss of Miss Gregory. "She was a person of fine grain," Heron said, "And one of the leading minor poets."

Her background was of the old Monterey and of the old California. Miss Gregory sprang from ancestors that included the De La Guerra y Norrega and Hartnell families.

Born at El Poso in San Luis Obispo county, Miss Gregory came early in life to Salinas and attended the University of California. She taught school in Monterey, headed the English department of the Sebastopol school system. She returned to the peninsula to teach English, Latin and Spanish.

A brother is Jackson Gregory, writer of Western fiction.

Dudley C. Carter, Carmel's sculptor in wood, is perennially good for publicity. The latest notice given to Carter's work was in the San Francisco News last week with a big three-column picture of Carter hacking away at a gigantic thunderbird in redwood.

Sumner Prindle, pianist with Ralph Linsley and Douglas Thompson, in the Fifth Annual Carmel Bach Festival, July 17-23.

Carter, now taking a well-earned vacation in his native Northwest, has his home on the Carmel River where he has also a studio built of hand-hewn redwood and put together with nary a nail, but with thongs and wooden pegs.

Records the News:

From the Indians with whom he lived as a boy, Dudley C. Carter, WPA Federal Art Project artist, learned to carve the totem-poles displayed in the woodsy garden of the Shasta Cascade Building on Treasure Island.

Mr. Carter was reared among the Indians of the Northwest. He hunted with the bow. He learned to catch animals in primitive snares. He studied the wildlife about him. And as a youngster he became skilled with the carving tools of the Indians.

For a time he stayed with the primitive Kwaquitl Indians in Alert Bay. They still built their great war canoes. Families were housed communally in large structures of sweet-smelling cedar slab walls and roofs. They danced their weird ceremonials. Potlatches, or feasts, lasted for months. Rich chieftains gave away all their possessions in order to be considered great among their people.

In this region the heraldic totem-pole was still carved. The bear, wolf, beaver, loon, raven, killer-whale and frog were still represented on lofty posts.

It was in the shadow of the thunberbird that Dudley Carter heard the legends of the tribe from the old Indians, learned their weaving designs, and watched their carving.

At 18 he was an expert logger and camp foreman in his father's lumber camp, and later when illness kept him from attending university, he took the courses privately, with tutors, to study engineering.

For several years he followed the career of forest engineer. He traveled back over the old home sites. He sailed in an open boat over the North Pacific waters. He ran the skukum chuck (rapid rivers) in canoe, scaled high peaks, packed his equipment and supplied with tump-strap into the interior. He often lived solely off the land. Mowich (deer), wild plants and berries were his fare.

Exploring the regions which were once the stamping grounds of the Kwaquitl, Nootka, Haida, and Thlingit tribes, he would come upon a deserted village or graveyard now overgrown in sal-lal and hemlock. There he would see the fallen totem poles, monuments to a people who had passed with their primitive culture almost overnight.

During the depression, Dudley Carter took up a formal study of art. He attended the Cornish School in Seattle. Later he worked as a commercial artist and then won a scholarship in a sculpture contest. With this scholarship he took up his art seriously and became a teacher at the Seattle Art Institute and the Seattle Academy of Art.

In 1932, Mr. Carter decided to use his early absorbed knowledge of primitive sculpture. His first group symbolized an Indian legend. It was hewn of cedar and weighed two tons. The sculpture now stands in the garden court of the New Seattle Art Museum.

From that time on Dudley Carter has continued this heroic wood sculpture. He fells his own trees—mostly redwood. He carves with the broad-ax, adze, and froe. At present, he and Mrs. Carter live in a redwood house in Carmel—all hand-hewn and carved, and assembled with pegs.

Rev. Carel J. Hulsewe Leaves for Europe Trip

To attend the first World Conference of Christian Youth and to again visit the land of his youth he left 25 years ago, Rev. Carel J. Hulsewé left this week for The Netherlands. The pastor of All Saints Church, Carmel, departed on Wednesday and will sail from New York with 50 Episcopal youth delegates on the Holland-American line Statendam.

The youth conference in Amsterdam will meet from July 24 to Aug. 3. For almost a year Rev. Hulsewé has been looking forward to this opportunity to join the 250 delegates and hundreds of others of all Protestant faiths in his home land.

During his absence, Rev. Egbert Clark, dean of men at Santa Rosa Junior College, will be acting pastor of All Saints Church. Mrs. Hulsewé will not accompany her husband, but is going to Yosemite for this month and then will return to her home in Carmel.

Mr. Hulsewé will be one of the four national advisors of Episcopal activity among young people and will be a leader of the large group sailing from New York July 13. Altogether 35 nations will be represented by 1600 delegates.

The Amsterdam meeting is patterned after the interdenominational Oxford and Edinburgh conferences of 1937. Besides organized churches, sponsors of the conference are the international Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. and the World Student Christian Federation.

"The Christian in the Community, in Education, in the Economic Order, and the Christian Church in the World of Nations" will be the joint themes of the conference, according to Mr. Hulsewé, while many particular problems have been set for discussion in various groups.

Mr. Hulsewé will preach at the Church of England in Amsterdam on Aug. 13 by special invitation, and following the conference will visit in Great Britain, returning to Carmel by mid-October.

Point Lobos, "Jonah" Ship, Carries Local Sanitary Equipment

Engineers for the Carmel Sanitary Plant job breathed a little easier recently when it was learned that the steam freighter Point Lobos had been freed from a beach in the Golden Gate.

The Point Lobos, a ship with a "Jonah", carried mechanical equipment for the new sewage disposal plant now being built by the F. C. Stolte company on Carmel river.

Twice before the Point Lobos has had untoward events aboard, one of them a murder, and is becoming to be regarded as a "jinx" ship.

A little festive air crept into Carmel last Friday evening along with a few out-of-town cars. This little air was lonesome; it didn't know whether it was welcome or not. Saturday evening, as more cars had arrived, the air felt much better in spite of the fog with which Carmel seemed determined to dampen its spirits. Sunday, with the arrival of more and more visitors, the festive air felt it had a right to be here. On Monday, Carmel capitulated and the sun shone. The inhabitants of the village found the cars had been filled with old friends and welcome ones. They gathered the little festive spirit to themselves and it assumed gala proportions under the patronage. Tuesday the festive air reached its maturity and with one final blaze of firework glory showered itself over the bay and then disappeared until the next Fourth of July week-end.

Mrs. Russell Williams and her two children arrived here on Monday morning. They were met in Los Angeles by Mrs. Williams' mother, Mrs. Theodore Criley, with whom they will spend the summer at Carmel Highlands. Dr. Williams, who is a resident physician at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, will join his family here in August and expects to establish his practice on the Monterey peninsula.

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD US"

Dedicated to Lorraine
May 29, 1939

Gentle Jesus, meek and mild
Please send us all the Faith of a child;
A faith so real that it can heal
The wounds — which sends a child to kneel
And ask that God will take away
All pain and sorrow when we pray,
And feeling sure the Lord has heard
Goes happy back to play deferred,
And strives with every loving deed
To show us what it is we need —
More Faith, more Love; if we will heed
"A little child shall surely lead."

Jessie Joan as Tatters Promised at First Stage

By FRANCIS L. LLOYD

Jessie Joan Brown, who has filled a number of leading roles with the Troupers of the Gold Coast, will next play Tatters in "Tatters, the Pet of Squatters' Gulch", at the First Theater, Monterey.

Miss Brown, who on Tuesday evening completed the 14th presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by the Troupers with twin-roles, is the most promising feminine stage material we have seen since Rosalie James herself played Tatters.

This week, Jessie Joan was handed her lines and told to get ready for mid-July, when Tatters will again thrill the audiences that have packed the First Theater during the extended run of "Uncle Tom" and other productions of the Troupers. Gordon Knoles will play opposite her and a first-rate cast has been lined up by Denny-Watrous.

Once again, over the July 4 holiday, "Uncle Tom" and the fuller olio tickled the visitors and homefolk alike. With Al Knight as master of ceremonies, and Knoles, Allison Shoemaker, Bob Bratt and Whipple Gregerson, the olio was a standout success. Gregerson, recently arrived on the peninsula from Watsonville, and Knoles were the toreadors to Bratt's Ferdinand-Gone-Carmel. Shoemaker was excellent both as the deacon in "Uncle Tom" and as bass and fiddler in two quartets.

Willa Mae McIntosh, who can do both serious drama and toss her all into the lighter stuff, sang the old song, "Just a Bird in a Gilded Cage", with just the right amount of buffoonery.

Those little kids, Mary Jean Elliott as Little Eva, and Carol Walker as Topsy, can't be denied any amount of bouquets for roles they kept fresh after a dozen appearances.

Now we look forward to "Tatters", a smash hit at the First Theater more than a year ago.

'Moonlight Sonata' One of Features on the Filmarte Screen

Manager Richard Bare this week announces that the Filmarte theater is featuring, besides "Moonlight Sonata" with Ignace Jan Paderewski, world famous pianist and Polish patriot, Richard Tauber in "I Pagliacci" with lyrics by John Drinkwater; and, next week, "South Riding" with Edna Best.

A faithful transposition of the Leoncavallo opera "I Pagliacci", with the prologue and last act done in technicolor, is current on the Filmarte screen. Tauber, world famous tenor, plays Canio and also Punchinello. Steffi Duna plays Nedda and also Columbine.

The lyrics by John Drinkwater, the noted English playwright, have lost nothing in the translation from the Italian, and the story as well as songs are heard in English.

"Moonlight Sonata" will be seen Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Starting Wednesday for two days is the Alexander Korda film, "South Riding", which was voted one of the year's ten best by the National Board of Review. It stars Edna Best and Ralph Richardson and tells a tale of modern, rural English life.

Lew Ayres and Jeanette MacDonald, who appear in "Broadway Serenade" at the Carmel Theater Sunday to Tuesday.

ROLF PIELKIE CONDUCTS LIFE CLASS AT INSTITUTE

The Carmel Art Institute began a new Life Class on Wednesday evening under the direction of Rolf Pielkie, well known California artist. These classes will be held Wednesday and Friday evenings from 7:15 to 9:15. The models of the Art Institute are to be utilized throughout the course. A small fee is to be charged for each evening.

Kit Whitman, in announcing these classes, described Mr. Pielkie as being exceptionally capable. Recently he has taught in the California School of Fine Arts; Gumps exhibited his work in a One-Man Show; he conducted a course for the Junior League and has just completed illustrating John Steinbeck's books.

Mr. J. J. Jacobs and his two daughters from Sacramento spent the holiday week at La Playa Hotel.

Van den Burg Back Again for Festival; Outstanding Viola

Herbert Van den Burg, first viola of the St. Louis Symphony for the last nine years, is again spending his summer on the Pacific Coast, and for the second time will head the viola section of the Bach Festival. Mr. Van den Burg is one of the leading viola players of the country, and Carmel's Bach Festival Orchestra could have no finer viola principal did it have the choice of all in the United States.

Herbert Van den Burg graduated with distinction from the Royal Conservatory, Holland, studied in Paris, and toured Europe as a member of the Holland Instrumental Quintet. He was solo viola of the National Opera at The Hague. He is a member of the internationally distinguished Van den Burg family, his brother being the solo cellist and assistant conductor of the San Francisco Symphony for the last five years under Pierre Monteux, and his family, musicians for many generations.

Dennis Hannan Summer Visitor and Violinist for Festival of Bach

One of the gratifying happenings attendant with Carmel's annual Bach Festival is the summer residence in Carmel of distinguished musicians. Among musicians who are summering in Carmel and who have come into the Bach Festival orchestra is Dennis Hannan, gifted young Seattle violinist. Mr. Hannan for the past four years has been a member of the first violin section of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra. Last season he spent the summer months at the Fontainebleu Conservatory of Music, France. This summer it is Carmel's good fortune that Mr. Hannan should have taken residence here, and have become a part of the Bach Festival. Denis Hannan is a member of the Queen Anne Institute of Music and has played as a concert violinist with marked success.

Mr. Hannan has opened a studio of the violin in Carmel, alternating his teaching between here and San Francisco.

Jeanette Dances In Musical Film on Carmel Screen

Jeanette MacDonald, who started her career as a dancer, returned to dancing for her role in "Broadway Serenade", which shows at the Carmel Theater Sunday to Tuesday.

Strangely enough, Miss MacDonald went through her first years of pictures without an opportunity to display her terpsichorean ability, and it was not until "The Firefly" that she danced before the cameras.

"Broadway Serenade" marks her second dancing role since that time. In "Sweethearts" she appeared in an eccentric Dutch number with Ray Bolger. In the current musical film, she is seen as a musical comedy favorite with Lew Ayres as her composer-husband.

Supporting are Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Al Shean, Virginia Grey, Rita Johnson, William Gargan and Franklin Pangborn. The background is that of the theater. A wide variety of songs is offered, "For Every Lonely Heart," "High Flyin'", "Rhapsody", "One Look at You", etc.

Occupying Miss Myra Palache's home in Carmel for two weeks is her friend, Miss Annette Wirdele of San Francisco. Miss Palache is at present on a visit to New York.

Dramatics are the most popular activity of the Pacific Grove and Corral de Tierra Girl Scouts who attended the Girl Scout camp last week. The Eldorado or older girls' patrol, presented an original play entitled the "Paloozas Out West". The principal characters were Barbara Foster, Vivian Castro, Jean Turner and Marjorie Morton. Two puppet plays, "Hansen and Gretel" and "Ferdinand" were presented by the El Rancho patrol Friday evening. The puppet figure of Ferdinand particularly delighted the camp audience. Beverley Puget presided as Uncle Ezra at the Saturday night barn dance. Each camper fashioned a musical instrument and participated on the barn dance program. The milk bottle chimes arranged by Barbara Tice and the funnel boazooka played by Ila Jean Morrison had the greatest musical possibilities.

There was a studious touch as well as the lighter vein, as campers participated in star and insect finder projects. The girls completed and used a series of star charts and learned star legends. Other girls tried vainly to find bugs that would not eat each other in the bug cage.

But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye; and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; . . . For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit."

Additional fire protection regulations and personnel for Los Padres National Forest are announced this week by District Ranger Paul C. Case of King City.

The protection force on the Monterey district of Los Padres National Forest will consist of the following men for the 1939 season:

Monterey district: Paul C. Case, district ranger; Samuel A. Miles, protective assistant; Jesse C. Hickey, dispatcher; King City. Guards, Max Calvert, Carmel; Darwin R Conover, Chews Ridge; Edwin W. Neal, Indians; Preston A. Powers, Salmon Creek; Ralph Rhyne, Big Sur; William W. Bane, Los Burros. Lookouts, George Frame, Ventana; Roy A. Rovanstine, Pinon Peak; Varian A. Wadleigh, Chews Ridge; E. Lloyd Ely Jr., Santa Lucia; Jean E. Sindel, Three Peaks; Don Hood, Cone Peak.

No fireworks are allowed in the National Forest areas due to the extreme danger of fire starting from this course. Another fire prevention regulation will be in effect this year—"Possession or use of tracer ammunition is prohibited in the National Forest." This regulation will be strictly enforced.

In regard to the recent report or rumor that the water in Arroyo Seco Creek was polluted, the county health officers have personally tested and examined the water and report no pollution present.

Fourth Has Glorious Night; Beach Throngs Celebrate

Yes, it was a Glorious Fourth in Carmel! Especially because of the well-mannered visitors and the success in restricting the popping of firecrackers to the beach.

The week-end fog dampened the spirits of many visitors, sent some on their way to warmer parts, while those from torrid valleys thrilled with the slight chill. Nevertheless, it did weaken somewhat the ardor of the celebration until Monday brought clearing weather and Tuesday blushed with almost a heat-and-humidity wave.

The Fourth at the Beach was just about as big as last year's celebration of this traditional Carmel affair, but an "Oregon mist" wept down on the village and rather spoiled the spectacular scene.

Over at Pebble Beach, the "tony and select" popped their crackers and bombs. Holes were blown in two row boats under the wharf by over-enthusiastic celebrants, one of the skiffs reputedly the personal property of S. F. B. Morse, Del Monte's boss, and the volume of sound and the glow of the shelling were magnificent.

Carmel police felt rewarded for last year's severe control of drinkers and drivers, and this year had few complaints of any kind of rowdiness. Possibly the alcoholics and tin-canisters went on to Santa Cruz and had their fun and spent their dimes there. In the light of current business conditions, local merchants could have little complaint, however, it was reported in many quarters.

BOLIN TRAFFIC CASE APPEAL GOES TO COURT

The speeding case of Mrs. Kathryn Bolin, which resulted in legislative action this year, went to Superior Court yesterday for appeal hearing. Mrs. Bolin was fined $10 recently.

Fault Found with Fire Hydrant Service Told In Report by Leidig

Fire hydrant tests recently completed by Fire Chief Robert Leidig showed various weak points in the system, according to a report handed the council this week.

"Glaring inadequacy" was found by Leidig in the Dolores and Mission street hydrant flow between Ocean and Tenth avenues, and a hydrant at Dolores and Seventh flowing at one-third capacity required by fire underwriters, he said, together with "weak stream" flow at Mission and Seventh.

Mission and Eighth and Ninth hydrants, Leidig reported, are "useless" for fighting fire at Sunset school.

NOVENA-MISSION TO BE HELD AT OLD MISSION

Starting next Saturday evening a Novena in honor of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel will be held at the old Mission.

The devotions will continue for nine days, being held mornings and evenings.

The Rev. Andrew Oehms, a Redemptionist priest, a nationally known preacher, will be in charge of the novena.

The devotions will be held each morning and evening at 7:30.

Masses during the summer months are at 7, 9 and 11 o'clock.

FOREST THEATER RECEIVES ARTS AND CRAFTS CHECK

E. A. H. Watson, representing the Carmel Arts and Crafts Association, long active in the amateur theater here, handed over a check for $146.23 to the city for the Forest Theater restoration job. This amount represented some of the balance left from "Inchling" and the fair given at the Forest Theater three years ago.
